

landowners achieve their long term land conservation strategies.” Id. In December 2008, the United States issued a subpoena from this court seeking the production of documents from Terra Firma, a non-party. Id. Because many of the documents requested were also the subject of a document production request to ILC, the parties agreed to hold the subpoena in abeyance until ILC completed its production, which included thousands of documents from Terra Firma. Id.

However, in its request for production of documents to ILC, the United States requested production of “any and all contracts or agreements” between Terra Firma and ILC. See United States’ status report (#113) and ILC’s status report (#114). ILC’s position was that the consulting agreement between ILC and Terra Firma had nothing to do with the central issue in this proceeding, which is the value of the property at the time of taking. Id. At the January 28, 2009 discovery status conference, ILC reiterated its position that the relationship between ILC and Terra Firma had no bearing on the valuation of the property, particularly since both sides have retained experts who will testify about property value.¹ ILC contended that Terra Firma had submitted all of its information to ILC’s appraiser for the purpose of forming his expert opinion, that the appraiser was not acting under Terra Firma’s direction, and that the United States appeared to be engaged in an attack against Terra Firma through this litigation. Terra Firma advanced similar arguments at the hearing and expressed concern that the United States’ true motive was to undermine Terra Firma in other land acquisition projects involving federal lands.

The United States countered that production of the consulting agreement was warranted because it was the impetus for communications between ILC and Terra Firma and characterized Terra Firma as a key player in the land acquisition agreement and in ascribing a value to the property. Moreover, Terra Firma identified experts that ILC has subsequently relied upon for its opinion of value and contended that those experts have a financial incentive in the outcome of the case. This court ordered the consulting agreement be produced in camera, and after review, exercised its discretion and ordered that it not be produced on the ground that its production would not lead to the discovery of admissible evidence (#128). The United States did not object to the court’s order or seek reconsideration.

¹The court reviewed the tape recordings of the January 28, 2009 and June 12, 2009 hearings.

1 In early January 2009, this court approved an order concerning inadvertent disclosure of 2 privileged information, which provides a mechanism for the return of such inadvertently disclosed 3 privileged documents (#108). Thereafter, ILC produced over 250,000 pages of documents, and 4 inadvertently produced documents it characterized as documents unrelated to the subject matter of this 5 case (#202). Among those documents is Exhibit A-20, which consists of September 2007 email
6 correspondence concerning Terra Firma's fee arrangement with ILC. Prior to the June 12, 2009 hearing, 7 the parties and Terra Firma filed briefs concerning the disputed documents, including Exhibit A-20 (#s 8 202, 210, 215 & 217).

9 ILC contended that given the massive number of documents produced, the inadvertent disclosure 10 or "claw back" order should be expanded to include documents that would not lead to the discovery of 11 admissible evidence, such as Exhibit A-20 (#202). Terra Firma joined in that argument, but also 12 asserted that since Exhibit A-20 relates to the consulting agreement this court had earlier ordered was 13 not discoverable, Exhibit A-20 is likewise not discoverable (#217). The United States' position, with 14 which the Court ultimately agreed, was that documents subject to relevancy objections should not be 15 given the "claw back" protections afforded to those subject to the attorney-client privilege or the work
16 product doctrine (#210). The Court then considered the dispute in the context of a motion for protective 17 order, which requires the objecting party to show good cause why the document should be protected 18 from discovery. Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(c).

19 During oral argument at the June 12, 2009 discovery status conference, the United States noted 20 that when the court issued its prior order that the consulting agreement would not be produced, it did not 21 appreciate the implications of Terra Firma's financial stake in the outcome of the litigation, and the 22 primary reason advanced for nondisclosure of the consulting agreement was it had nothing to do with 23 the value of the property. In the interim, however, the implications of the contingent financial 24 relationship between ILC and Terra Firma have become highly relevant. If a Terra Firma representative 25 testifies concerning the subject property, Terra Firma's financial stake in the outcome of the litigation
26 is relevant to that witness's credibility, and the jury is entitled to this information. Moreover, Rule 26(c)
27 does not require the United States to demonstrate the document is relevant; rather, it is ILC and Terra 28

1 Firma's burden to establish good cause to prevent its disclosure. Since they failed to meet their burden 2 and show the harm that will result from disclosure, the document should be produced.

3 ILC and Terra Firma contended that the Court had already reviewed the consulting agreement
4 itself, which spelled out the terms of Terra Firma's compensation, and based upon that review, the Court 5 found good cause to prohibit disclosure of the agreement (#108). Terra Firma noted that the United 6 States failed to object to the court's order or to seek reconsideration and reiterated its position that the 7 value of the property – not Terra Firma's compensation – is the central issue in this condemnation 8 action.

9 The Court has carefully reviewed the recordings of the January 28 and June 12, 2009 discovery 10 status conferences and the papers relevant to the dispute concerning the consulting agreement and 11 Exhibit A-20. When the court originally ordered that the consulting agreement not be produced, ILC
12 and Terra Firma's central argument against disclosure was that it was irrelevant to the real issue in this 13 case, namely, the value of the subject property at the time of the taking. As the case has progressed, the 14 court has gained a fuller understanding of Terra Firma's role in the land acquisition agreement and the 15 interplay among ILC, Terra Firma, and ILC's potential experts and appraiser. The court is now 16 convinced that the consulting agreement is relevant to the credibility of Terra Firma representatives who 17 will testify at trial. It is undisputed that in condemnation actions, "[t]he modern trend favors a broad rule 18 of admissibility; and any evidence is admissible which might reasonably influence a willing seller and 19 a willing buyer." United States v. 100 Acres of Land, 468 F.2d 1261, 1267 (9th Cir. 1972) (citations 20 omitted). Terra Firma's contention that disclosure of the consulting agreement and Exhibit A-20 raises 21 legitimate concerns that Terra Firma's business plan and work on behalf of other landowners may be 22 prejudiced, but disclosure, albeit inadvertent, has already occurred and cannot be undone. Nevertheless, 23 Terra Firma's concerns can be properly addressed through a stipulated protective order to protect 24 confidential documents parties and non-parties consider to be confidential business or financial 25 information.

Based upon the foregoing, and for good cause appearing, the court orders as follows:

1. Exhibit A-20 and the consulting agreement between Terra Firma and ILC shall be produced to the United States;
2. Good cause exists that the above-described documents and any other documents relating to the consulting agreement between Terra Firma and ILC shall be produced;
3. The court's February 2, 2009 minute order (#128) is VACATED;
4. The court finds good cause exists to seal Exhibit A-20 (#210-2), and the Clerk of Court shall seal that exhibit; and,
5. The parties shall submit a stipulated protective order to protect the confidentiality of information and documents the parties obtain in this case, and shall submit that proposed order no later than Friday, July 24, 2009. Attached to this order is a form of stipulated protective order that the parties may consider.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DATED: July 10, 2009.

In order to protect the confidentiality of confidential information obtained by the parties in connection with this case, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Any party or non-party may designate as “confidential” (by stamping the relevant page or other otherwise set forth herein) any document or response to discovery which that party or non-party considers in good faith to contain information involving trade secrets, or confidential business or financial information, subject to protection under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or Nevada law (“Confidential Information”). Where a document or response consists of more than one page, the first page and each page on which confidential information appears shall be so designated.

2. A party or non-party may designate information disclosed during a deposition or in response to written discovery as “confidential” by so indicating in said response or on the record at the deposition and requesting the preparation of a separate transcript of such material. Additionally a party or non-party may designate in writing, within twenty (20) days after receipt of said responses or of the deposition transcript for which the designation is proposed, that specific pages of the transcript and/or specific responses be treated as “confidential” information. Any other party may object to such proposal, in writing or on the record. Upon such objection, the parties shall follow the procedures described in paragraph 8 below. After any designation made according to the procedure set forth in this paragraph,

1 the designated documents or information shall be treated according to the designation until the matter
2 is resolved according to the procedures described in paragraph 8 below, and counsel for all parties shall 3 be responsible for making all previously unmarked copies of the designated material in their possession 4 or control with the specified designation.

5 3. All information produced or exchanged in the course of this case (other than information that 6 is publicly available) shall be used by the party or parties to whom the information is produced solely 7 for the purpose of this case.

8 4. Except with the prior written consent of other parties, or upon prior order of this Court
9 obtained upon notice to opposing counsel, Confidential Information shall not be disclosed to any person 10 other than:

11 (a) counsel for the respective parties to this litigation, including in-house counsel and co-counsel 12 retained for this litigation;

13 (b) employees of such counsel;

14 (c) individual defendants, class representatives, any officer or employee of a party, to the extent 15 deemed necessary by Counsel for the prosecution or defense of this litigation;

16 (d) consultants or expert witnesses retained for the prosecution or defense of this litigation,
17 provided that each such person shall execute a copy of the Certification annexed to this Order as Exhibit 18 "A" (which shall be retained by counsel to the party so disclosing the Confidential Information and made 19 available for inspection by opposing counsel during the pendency or after the termination of the action
20 only upon good cause shown and upon order of the Court) before being shown or given any Confidential 21 Information and provided that if the party chooses a consultant or expert employed by [THE 22 CORPORATE DEFENDANT] or one of its competitors (as listed on Appendix A), the party shall notify 23 the opposing party, or designating nonparty, before disclosing any Confidential Information to that 24 individual and shall give the opposing party an opportunity to move for a protective order preventing 25 or limiting such disclosure;

26 (e) any authors or recipients of the Confidential Information;

27 (f) the Court, Court personnel, and court reporters; and 28

1 (g) witnesses (other than persons described in paragraph 4(e)). A witness shall sign the 2 Certification before being shown a confidential document. Confidential Information may be disclosed
3 to a witness who will not sign the Certification only in a deposition at which the party who designated 4 the Confidential Information is represented or has been given notice that Confidential Information shall 5 be designated "Confidential" pursuant to paragraph 2 above. Witnesses shown Confidential Information 6 shall not be allowed to retain copies.

7 5. Any persons receiving Confidential Information shall not reveal or discuss such information 8 to or with any person who is not entitled to receive such information, except as set forth herein.

9 6. No party or non-party shall file or submit for filing as part of the court record any documents 10 under seal without first obtaining leave of court. Notwithstanding any agreement among the parties, the 11 party seeking to file a paper under seal bears the burden of overcoming the presumption in favor of 12 public access to papers filed in court.

13 7. A party may designate as "Confidential" documents or discovery materials produced by a non-14 party by providing written notice to all parties of the relevant document numbers or other identification
15 within thirty (30) days after receiving such documents or discovery materials. Any party or non-party 16 may voluntarily disclose to others without restriction any information designated by that party or non-17 party as confidential, although a document may lose its confidential status if it is made public.

18 8. If a party contends that any material is not entitled to confidential treatment, such party may 19 at any time give written notice to the party or non-party who designated the material. The party or non-20 party who designated the material shall have twenty-five (25) days from the receipt of such written 21 notice to apply to the Court for an order designating the material as confidential. The party or non-party 22 seeking the order has the burden of establishing that the document is entitled to protection.

23 9. Notwithstanding any challenge to the designation of material as Confidential Information, all 24 documents shall be treated as such and shall be subject to the provisions hereof unless and until one of 25 the following occurs:

26 (a) the party or non-party claims that the material is Confidential Information withdraws such 27 designation in writing; or 28

1 (b) the party or non-party who claims that the material is Confidential Information fails to apply
2 to the Court for an order designating the material confidential within the time period specified above 3 after receipt of a written challenge to such designation; or 4 (c) the Court rules the material is not confidential.

5 10. All provisions of this Order restricting the communication or use of Confidential Information
6 shall continue to be binding after the conclusion of this action, unless otherwise agreed or ordered. Upon 7 conclusion of the litigation, a party in the possession of Confidential Information, other than that which 8 is contained in pleadings, correspondence, and deposition transcripts, shall either (a) return such 9 documents no later than thirty (30) days after conclusion of this action to counsel for the party or non-10 party who provided such information, or (b) destroy such documents within the time period upon 11 consent of the party who provided the information and certify in writing within thirty (30) days that the 12 documents have been destroyed.

13 11. The terms of this Order do not preclude, limit, restrict, or otherwise apply to the use of 14 documents at trial.

15 12. Nothing herein shall be deemed to waive any applicable privilege or work product protection, 16 or to affect the ability of a party to seek relief for an inadvertent disclosure of material protected by 17 privilege or work product protection.

18 13. Any witness or other person, firm or entity from which discovery is sought may be informed 19 of and may obtain the protection of this Order by written advice to the parties' respective counsel or by 20 oral advice at the time of any deposition or similar proceeding.

23 CERTIFICATION

24 I hereby certify my understanding that Confidential Information is being provided to me pursuant 25 to the terms and restrictions of the Protective Order dated _____, in 26 _____, Civil No. _____. I have been given a copy of 27 that Order and read it. I agree to be bound by the Order. I will not reveal the Confidential Information 28 to anyone, except as allowed by the Order. I will maintain all such Confidential Information – including

1 copies, notes, or other transcriptions made therefrom – in a secure manner to prevent unauthorized
2 access to it. No later than thirty (30) days after the conclusion of this action, I will return the Confidential
3 Information -- including copies, notes or other transcriptions made therefrom – to the counsel who 4 provided me with the Confidential Information. I hereby consent to the jurisdiction of the United States
5 District Court for the purpose of enforcing the Protective Order.
